

Interest Assessment Results

The results are from an assessment of the Holland’s theory of interest which assesses individuals from among six types and fitment of interests leads to higher performance. For more details, refer below.

Top 3 Interest Types are Enterprising, Conventional, Social

Realistic

Individuals with Realistic interests like working with things, operating machines, tools and computers.They like working in field jobs. They are practical, frank, focused, persistent and action oriented. They can also be traditional, uninvolved and inflexible at times.

Investigative

Individuals with Investigative interests like to watch, learn, analyze, research design and solve problems. They thrive in research and data analysis jobs . They are curious, analytical, unconventional and independent. They can also be loners and thinkers.

Artistic

Individuals with Artistic interests like to work with new ideas and come up with creative solutions. They are good communicators, work well in unstructured and pressure situations. They are imaginative, expressive, original and sensitive. They can also be impulsive and non conforming .

Social

Individuals with Social interests like to work with people and are interested in helping others They enjoy training, instructing, facilitating, ounseling or curing others. They are good public speakers, empathetic, trustworthy, cooperative, outgoing and sensitive. They can also be idealistic.

Enterprising

Individuals with Enterprising interests like to work with other people. They thrive in jobs which require influencing, leading, motivating and persuading others. They tend to be be assertive, ambitious, adventurous, optimistic, social and self confident. They can also be domineering and talkative

Conventional

Individuals with conventional interests like to work with data and in structured situations. They are good at jobs which are organized and require numerical abilities, designing and enforced processes. They tend to be careful, efficient, systematic and diligent. They can be thrifty at times.